People posting on social media is normal

But be careful on what you posts

Leaving footprints for future career

You might get doxxed

Doxxing refers to someone gathering pieces of personal information and posting them online - whether on a private page or in a more public location. In many cases, the intent is to harass the person or to lead others into harassing them. Doxxing has many dangers associated with it, but there are several ways to protect against this malicious activity.

Identity theft

Conclusion

If possible, Don't post anything on social media. It can potentially cause harm to you in long term. You are leaving digital footprints somewhere on the internet which can be accessible by anyone.
